Subject: NERRS website hosts new Science Collaborative section

Dear colleagues,

The NERRS Science Collaborative has created two online tools to keep you in touch with our program, the projects we fund, and what we are learning about collaborative approaches to science. The NERRS website now hosts a new section devoted to the collaborative at <http://nerrs.noaa.gov/ScienceCollaborative.aspx>. There you'll find the latest news about our program and the projects we fund. Please take a moment to get acquainted with these pages.

We also invite you to join the conversation at Science Collaboration Nation at <http://sciencecollaborationnation.blogspot.com>. This blog provides a forum for anyone interested in exchanging insights and resources on collaborative approaches to science. It was initially created as a resource for the folks on the projects we fund, but we think it might be interesting to others in the NERRS and beyond.

Please note: This blog was created and is powered by UNH staff who are members of the NERRS Science Collaborative. It also gets a boost from the occasional guest blogger. It DOES NOT represent the opinions or policies of the National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration.

We welcome any questions or suggestions on how to make them a better tool for communicating with you. Please send them along to Dolores Leonard at dolores.leonard@unh.edu.

Regards,

Dwight Trueblood (NOAA)

The NERRSALL listserve has been created by NOAA as a communications tool for the National Estuarine Research Reserve System and its partners.

Anyone can subscribe to this list. Information posted on the listserve should pertain to reserve system business. Individuals posting messages that include 1) salacious material; 2) offensive language; 3) personal names and personal comments irrelevant to the reserve System or its business and 4) advertisements will be banned from this list.

If you have questions about this listserve, contact Lisa S. Warr (Lisa.S.Warr@noaa.gov) or Erica Seiden (Erica.Seiden@noaa.gov).
